The conditions and circumstances requiring this emergency expenditure are:

The existing back-up generator for the Bowman Pump Station in East St. Louis has deteriorated to the point that it is not in a condition to operate in an emergency situation. This generator is required to power the Bowman Pump Station when all conventional power sources are disrupted and surface and ground water threaten to flood the interstate system in East St. Louis. It is not known what damages will be incurred to the existing state infrastructure or the facilities of East St. Louis if the power is severed from this pump station for an extended period of time. This facility has been in operation since the 1970's. The required repair consists of the replacement of the power transfer switch. This switch is currently inoperable and must be replaced to transfer power from the generator to the pump station.
